Ticket to Work for America’s Veterans

Social Security’s Ticket to Work (Ticket) program recognizes that military veterans have a lot to offer employers. For veterans receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI), the Ticket program offers help to identify transferable skills, prepare for and find job opportunities and transition to the civilian workplace.

Ahead of the competition

Employers value your military training and experience and recognize that because of your service, you have many skills to offer, including:

- Leadership
- Time management
- Organization
- Flexibility

Meet Robert, a veteran who spent 7 years serving in the U.S. Army. Robert sustained a spinal cord injury during a surgery mishap that left him with limited mobility. An EN helped answer questions about employment and helped him find work, where he now helps other veterans.

Getting started with the Ticket program

The Ticket program offers employment support through service providers, like Employment Networks (EN). If you’re age 18 through 64 and receive Social Security disability benefits, working with an EN may help you:

- Identify your skills
- Set work goals
- Prepare for the job search
- Find employment opportunities
- Handle job applications
- Prepare for interviews
- Transition to work
Some ENs are a part of the Public Workforce System, a network of federal, state and local offices that supports all qualified people with their work goals. In addition to career planning and job placement supports, many Workforce ENs also offer training and special programs for veterans.

Your State Vocational Rehabilitation (VR) agency may also provide more extensive services and support to prepare you to return to work, such as rehabilitation and individual counseling, adaptive equipment – such as wheelchairs and vehicle modifications – and college-level training.

Meet Renate, a veteran who served in the U.S. Army’s Military Police. After an injury, multiple seizures and a mood disorder diagnosis, Renate left her job and began receiving SSDI. Working with an EN helped her regain confidence in her abilities as she looked for work.
